

Grilles de Berger

Dans plusieurs sports et jeux, dont les échecs, dans un championnat toutes rondes où les joueurs (ou équipes) s'affrontent individuellement en rondes successives, la table de Berger indique les appariements de chaque ronde, de sorte que tous les joueurs se rencontrent une fois.

Dans certains jeux ou sports le premier cité joue à domicile ou reçoit les blancs (comme aux échecs). Les tables sont conçues pour équilibrer d'une part le nombre de rencontre à domicile – ou de parties avec les blancs – et l'alternance des rencontres d'autre part. Ainsi, dans un tournoi d'échecs composé de dix joueurs, la moitié des participants jouera cinq parties avec les blancs et quatre avec les noirs, tandis que l'autre moitié des participants jouera quatre parties avec les blancs et cinq avec les noirs. De plus chaque joueur n'aura au plus que deux parties consécutives avec la même couleur.

S'il y a un nombre impair de joueurs, un joueur fictif appelé bye est ajouté, et son adversaire désigné ne joue pas.
